TRANSFERS OF FARM REAL ESTATE

Number of properties and acreage transferred, by type of transfer, and average consideration in bona fide sales, 1933 or earlier years

Prepared by Division of Land Economics

This report presents for 414 selected counties in 47 States, basic data on (1) the total volume of farm real estate transfers classified according to type of transfer and (2) the average prices per acre paid for farm real estate in bona fide voluntary sales.

The collection and tabulation of the data for this report were carried out under a Civil Works Project, administered by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and assisted by the Agricultural Experiment Stations of each of the States for which data are presented 1/. The present publication is based on an intensive analysis of the selected counties made by the Bureau, largely under a grant of funds from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The 414 counties on which this report is based were selected from over 1,300 counties in which varying amounts of information were collected from official county records under the project. The 414 counties were selected with the objective of representing insofar as possible the different type-of-farming areas in the several States, giving due consideration to the adequacy, accuracy, and completeness of the data for the counties.

In transcribing data from the county records work was started on the most recent sales or transfers and then carried backward. The variation from county to county in the number of years for which data are presented reflects the variation in the time spent as well as in progress made in the particular counties during the operation of the project. In a few cases, in order to permit covering a longer period or obtaining a more widely distributed sample, data for alternate years were transcribed in certain counties, whereas in a limited number of others, only certain townships within a county were taken. The choice in individual counties was made by the State Project Leader. Cases in which the data apply to less than entire counties are indicated by footnotes.

1/ The project was designated officially as CWA Project F6, and consisted of two parts: (a) Farm land values and transfers, and (b) Tax delinquency. It was administered in the Bureau by a Joint Committee under the chairmanship of Eric Englund, Assistant Chief of the Bureau, and composed of Donald Jackson, V. N. Valgren and G. J. Isaac from the Division of Agricultural Finance, and B. R. Stauber and M. M. Regan from the Division of Land Economics. The analysis of the data on tax delinquency was handled as the chief responsibility of the Division of Agricultural Finance and has been published in the series "Tax Delinquency of Rural Real Estate". The analysis involved in presenting this publication, "Transfers of Farm Real Estate", has been carried out by the Division of Land Economics, with many helpful suggestions from the general committee.

TRANSFERS OF FARM REAL ESTATE

Number of properties and acreage transferred, by type of transfer, and average consideration in bona fide sales, 1933 or earlier years

Prepared by Division of Land Economics

This report presents for 414 selected counties in 47 States, basic data on (1) the total volume of farm real estate transfers classified according to type of transfer and (2) the average prices per acre paid for farm real estate in bona fide voluntary sales.

The collection and tabulation of the data for this report were carried out under a Civil Works Project, administered by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and assisted by the Agricultural Experiment Stations of each of the States for which data are presented 1/. The present publication is based on an intensive analysis of the selected counties made by the Bureau, largely under a grant of funds from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The 414 counties on which this report is based were selected from over 1,300 counties in which varying amounts of information were collected from official county records under the project. The 414 counties were selected with the objective of representing insofar as possible the different type-of-farming areas in the several States, giving due consideration to the adequacy, accuracy, and completeness of the data for the counties.

In transcribing data from the county records work was started on the most recent sales or transfers and then carried backward. The variation from county to county in the number of years for which data are presented reflects the variation in the time spent as well as in progress made in the particular counties during the operation of the project. In a few cases, in order to permit covering a longer period or obtaining a more widely distributed sample, data for alternate years were transcribed in certain counties, whereas in a limited number of others, only certain townships within a county were taken. The choice in individual counties was made by the State Project Leader. Cases in which the data apply to less than entire counties are indicated by footnotes.

1/ The project was designated officially as CWA Project F6, and consisted of two parts: (a) Farm land values and transfers, and (b) Tax delinquency. It was administered in the Bureau by a Joint Committee under the chairmanship of Eric Englund, Assistant Chief of the Bureau, and composed of Donald Jackson, V. N. Valgren and G. J. Isaac from the Division of Agricultural Finance, and B. R. Stauber and M. M. Regan from the Division of Land Economics. The analysis of the data on tax delinquency was handled as the chief responsibility of the Division of Agricultural Finance and has been published in the series "Tax Delinquency of Rural Real Estate". The analysis involved in presenting this publication, "Transfers of Farm Real Estate", has been carried out by the Division of Land Economics, with many helpful suggestions from the general committee.

The data presented provide a partial answer to the demand for information concerning long-time trends in farm realty values, and in frequency of transfer, and, it is hoped, will not only facilitate the study of the frequency of transfer and the prices at which farm real estate changed hands during and after the 1920 boom in farm land, but will also contribute to a more complete understanding of the nature and extent of the transfers of farm property as a result of delinquency on debt service and on taxes during the agricultural depression.

The data refer only to farm real estate, tracts of forest land having been excluded. Parcels of less than 3 acres, and platted properties were considered as nonfarm property and have been excluded.

It is well known, of course, that a wide variety of conditions and circumstances surround farm realty transactions; hence a careful classification of transfers was required to permit the making of valid comparisons and the drawing of sound conclusions. The primary classification divides the transfers into the following principal classes: (1) Voluntary transfers; (2) Assignments; (3) Foreclosures; (4) Bankruptcies and related defaults; (5) Tax sales; (6) Gifts and inheritances; (7) Other and unknown.

Sales classed as "voluntary" were of a number of kinds, and further subdivision of the group was necessary. This group has accordingly been divided into several sub-classes, the first of which depends upon whether the buyer and seller have the same or different surnames, it being probable that the former include many transfers between relatives. In such transfers the question may be raised as to whether the considerations are truly representative of those prevailing in the general market. Of course not all sales between relatives are thereby excluded nor are all sales between persons of the same surname necessarily sales between relatives. It is believed, however, that such a separation has tended in the direction of excluding sales between relatives, and in the direction of securing a group of sales in which the reported consideration is affected to a minimum by noneconomic motives. Transfers between those having different surnames have in turn been classified according to the type of deed given. Certain types are of particular significance.

"Quit-claim deeds", for example, occur in a variety of circumstances, such as the clearing of a title, possibly, but not necessarily, preparatory to the negotiation of a bona fide transfer. On the other hand, the frequency with which this type of deed occurred in certain localities during depression years suggests the possibility that discouraged debtors have given quit-claim deeds to their farms in the satisfaction of the mortgagees' claim against them.

Transfers involving warranty or special warranty deeds and in which buyers and sellers have different surnames have been further divided according to consideration. To arrive at a proper estimate of farm real estate prices, cases in which it was apparent that the full consideration was not stated in the deed were separated and classified as "nominal" (in most cases such transfers carried the notation "other valuable consideration " or a similar term); and those in which the full and true consideration was adjudged to be stated in the deed were so classified. Sales in the latter classification are presumed to be "bona fide" sales in which both the buyer and the seller act of their own free will, and in which the consideration approximates the buyer's and seller's estimate of the true market value of the property. The consideration in this group of transfers includes all cash paid, and any debts or mortgages "assumed" or otherwise entering into the transaction. The proportion of transfers in which the "true consideration" was given varied greatly between States, as well as between counties within the same State. In some instances the number of such sales is so small that doubt may be entertained as to whether the prices at which the farms were transferred can be taken as representing the general level of values for the whole county. This situation should be considered in judging the significance of the data, particularly where marked changes in average values occur from one year to another.

After 1900, sales prices of farm real estate as well as the volume of voluntary transfers rose almost continuously until 1920. The sharp drop in both prices and frequency of sale in the early part of the 1920-29 decade was followed by some recovery in the volume of voluntary transfers during the later half of the period, although sales prices continued to decline gradually in most areas. After 1930, both the frequency of voluntary transfer as well as sales prices dropped sharply.

Forced transfers were almost negligible during the rise in farm land values up to 1920, but became an important factor about the middle of the 1920-29 decade, particularly in certain areas. After 1930, they became increasingly important, particularly in the Middle West and the South, exceeding the number of voluntary transfers in many counties.

Compilations of data on the ratio of assessed value to consideration in bona fide sales of farm land with improvements are in preparation.
